Re: VanDerStok et al. v. Bondi et al., No. 4:22-cv-00691-O (N.D. Tex.)

Dear Mr. Flores:

My clients in the above-listed case understand that you have requested the views of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) as to whether the following items as advertised for sale on the website of your client Defense Distributed fall within the scope of Final Rule, Definition of “Frame or Receiver” and Identification of Firearms, 87 Fed. Reg. 24,652 (Apr. 26, 2022) (codified at 27 C.F.R pts. 447, 478, and 479) (“the rule”):

- AR-15 80% Lower Receiver – Forged and/or jigs sold therewith
- AK-47 80% Lower Receiver and/or jigs sold therewith
- AR-15 80% Lower Receiver and/or jigs sold therewith
- AR-308 80% Lower Receiver and/or jigs sold therewith

You have also asked whether the following items as advertised for sale on ghostgunner.net fall within the scope of the rule:

- CNC Machines
- Optic Cut
- 80% AR-15 Lower Receiver
- Starter Kits and Jig Sets
- “Zero percent”—with the exception of “GO Grip Module”
- “Materials”
- “Fixtures”
- “Accessories”
- “Tooling”
- “Spare parts”
- “Service and repairs”

You have also inquired whether the following item as advertised for sale on G80.com falls within the scope of the rule:

- G80 Jig Set

In response to your request, ATF has determined that these items do not fall within the scope of the rule. Accordingly, neither ATF nor any of the other defendants in the above-listed case will enforce the rule against Defense Distributed with respect to any of the listed items during the pendency of the above-referenced case.

Furthermore, ATF has agreed that if Defense Distributed provides ATF with a sample of the following items sold by Defense Distributed (including all materials sold with the respective items), ATF will expedite its review of these items and provide an expedited informal classification whether the items fall within the scope of the rule:

- GO Grip Module (as sold on ghostgunner.net)
- G80 Build Bundle (as sold on G80.com)
- G80 Unfinished Receiver (as sold on G80.com)
- G80 Grip Module (as sold on G80.com)

CHAPTER THREE

Public Economy: The Well-Ordered Market

So the markets are regulated.—Thomas M. Cooley

Public safety was a first-order concern of the well-regulated society to which all private rights and interests were subordinated. An examination of fire regulations thus goes far toward demystifying American private property. Property rights in the early nineteenth century were social, relative, and historical, not individual, absolute, and natural. A second aspect of American liberal mythology that stands in need of disenchantment concerns that mysterious and value-laden sociohistorical force known as “the market.” Polity and economy have a very special relationship. But despite being at the center of American historical research for over a century, basic assumptions about the American state and the market have remained surprisingly static. First, state regulation and market economics are seen as diametrical opposites. Regulation is a contrived and public interference in a field of invisible economic relations otherwise natural and private.¹ Second, American economic regulation is understood as a relatively recent invention. As Thomas McCraw argued in 1975 (perhaps with the Massachusetts Board of Railroad Commissioners in mind), “regulation is barely a century old.”²

This chapter takes aim at both of these assumptions. Through a historical reconstruction of nineteenth-century notions of public economy and the well-ordered market, it establishes the predominance in theory and practice of an approach to economic life in early America antithetical to the classical separation of market and state. The cases, statutes, and ordinances analyzed here suggest that early Americans understood the economy as simply another part of their well-regulated society, intertwined with public safety, morals, health, and welfare and subject to the same kinds of legal controls. Far from viewing the state and the economy as adversarial, public economy was part of a world-view slow to separate public and private, government and society. It understood commerce, trade, and economics, like health and morals, as fundamentally public in nature, created, shaped, and regulated by the polity via public law.

This chapter also demonstrates the deep roots of economic regulation in America. In contrast to historical depictions of the period from 1776 to 1860 as an era of Americanization, transformation, and modernization heralding the ascendancy of liberal constitutionalism and free-market economics, it documents the pervasiveness of a commitment to a regulated economy in a well-ordered society. Indeed, the deluge of restrictions on economic life passed by state and local authorities in this period suggests that “regulation” might supplant “the market” as a better metaphor for the age. Regulations were not quaint residues of a feudal regime doomed to obsolescence. Rather public economy and the well-regulated society functioned as central, compelling philosophies in early American public law—philosophies busily put into practice through a host of particular rules and prosecutions solicitous of public goods over individual interests.

The market did not burst on the American stage circa 1776 of its own natural self-volition. It was a human, historical, and political creation. Postrevolutionary America was indeed the site of an economic transformation. But it owed more to the visible laws of police than the natural laws of economics. This was a revolution that had more to do with the conspicuous invention of political economy than the invisible hand of the free market.

Market Revolution or Legal-Political Economy?

The first hurdle blocking a reconstruction of the notion of public economy in nineteenth-century America is a twentieth-century perspective that separates public and private and understands economy as an autonomous and natural force in history. One of its most persistent historical themes is the notion of antebellum America as a site for the pivotal transition from colonial mercantilism to laissez-faire capitalism. The publication of Adam Smith’s Wealth of Nations (1776), the story goes, “inaugurated an economic revolution by emphasizing laissez-faire and individualism in place of the mercantilist emphasis on government intervention and statism.”³ Building on accounts of the ascen-

1 matters relating to guns or gun powder.⁷² Thus, Massachusetts enacted a law that 2 prohibited storing a loaded weapon in a home, a firearms safety law that recognized 3 that the unintended discharge of firearms posed a serious threat to life and limb.⁷³
4 New York City even granted broad power to the government to search for gun 5 powder and transfer powder to the public magazine for safe storage:

13 very core of the police power and inheres in both states and local municipalities.
14 The application of the police power to firearms and ammunition was singled out as 15 the quintessential example of state police power by Chief Justice John Marshall in 16 his 1827 discussion of laws regulating gun powder in Brown v. Maryland.⁷⁵ This 17 was so even though gunpowder was essential to the operation of firearms at that 18 time and gun powder regulations necessarily affected the ability of gun owners to 19 use firearms for self-defense, even inside the home.

An ACT providing for the inspection of Gun-powder.

[See vol. 2,
pa. 401, and the note
thereto.]

WHEREAS gun-powder imported from abroad, and manufactured within this state, hath frequently been found to vary much in its strength, and sometimes of inferior qualities, and its defects not discovered until brought into actual use: And whereas the modes heretofore used to prove the force thereof have been found uncertain and variable: And whereas Joseph Leacock, of the city of Philadelphia, hath invented an engine, called a pendulum powder proof, with a graduated arch and catch-pall, by which it is conceived that the force of gun-powder may be proved by experiment, and the article reduced to certain and uniform standards of strength, whereby the manufacture may be advanced towards ultimate perfection, and the purchaser and consumer protected against fraud and imposition:

SECT. I. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, That from and after the first day of October next, all gun-powder manufactured within this state, with intent to sell the same within the city or county of Philadelphia, shall be put in good and tight kegs or casks of twenty-five, fifty, or one hundred pounds neat weight, each made of well seasoned timber, bound together with at least twelve hoops, and having a hole bored in each head, of the diameter of one fourth part of an inch, well stopped with corks and having the tare weight of each cask marked thereon, and that all such county of Philadelphia for sale, shall be deposited, forthwith on such importation or bringing in by land or by water, in the public magazine in the said city, and delivered to the care of the keeper of the same, who shall give his receipt for the same, deliverable to the order of him or them who shall so deposit the same.

SECT. II. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, Commissioners appointed to procure pendulum
powder
proofs.
 That David Rittenhouse, Francis Gurney, and Thomas Proctor be,
 and they are hereby, appointed commissioners, to procure at least two pendulum powder proofs, upon the construction invented by the said Joseph Leacock, as nearly uniform in the length of the radius and weight of pendulum, and in length of caliber and weight of the pistol, as they can procure the same, and therewith make experiments of the respective strength or force of the several species of gun-powder imported from abroad, and manufactured within this state, sufficient in number to ascertain the quality and force of three different degrees of strength in explosion, and marking the number of degrees on the graduated arch of the said engine, to which equal quantities by weight of the said three species of gun-powder, rammed with equal force into the pistol, shall elevate the said pendulum ; and the powder, which shall be barely capable of raising the said pendulum to the lowest rate of elevation, shall be the standard for the state of Pennsylvania for gun-powder of the first or lowest proof ; and the powder, which shall be capable of raising the said pendulum to the highest rate of elevation, shall be the standard of gun-powder for the state of Pennsylvania of the third or highest proof ; and the middle or second proof standard of gun-powder shall be ascertained by the number of degrees on the said graduated arch, to which the same quantity by weight in equal moieties of the first and third proof powder shall be capable of raising the said pendum ; and the said standard being so fixed and ascertained, the said commissioners shall make report thereof in writing, by indentures under their hands and seals, one part thereof, together with one of the said two pendulum powder proofs, and as accurate a draft and description thereof as can be made shall be returned to the Governor, to be filed and remain in the office of the Secretary of the commonwealth ; one other part shall be returned to the Master of the Rolls, to be recorded in his office, and filed among the laws of the state ; and the other part, together with the other pendulum powder proofs, shall be delivered to the first Inspector of gun-powder to be appointed in pursuance of this act, and by him, and his successors in office, to his and their successors, as often as another officer shall be appointed.

SECT. III. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, The commissioners to

proofs;
 That so often as the said pendulum powder proofs in the possession of the Inspector shall by natural wear, or by accident, be renpared with the other remaining in the Secretary's office, and if found necessary, a new one constructed, and made conformably thereto in
